

TREATMENT

Unbreaking the Brain is a documentary that takes an honest look at the realities teens face around the country and how it is affecting the health of their brains, even into adulthood. From rural to urban, single parent homes to large families, private school settings to local public schools, our children are waking up everyday to live in the world we created for them. And it's literally killing them.

Never before in history have teens faced such staggeringly high rates of suicide, depression, accidental overdoses, emotional dysregulation, social disfunction, bullying, and even sexual exploitation. Not to mention the historical level of addictions to sex, opioids, pornography, alcohol, technology, and recreational and prescription drugs. The teenage years have gone from a time of maturation into adulthood, to a gauntlet of dangers and potentially traumatic influences that can damage the remainder of their lives permanently (barring serious intervention).

The question is... how did we get here? And how do we get out?

Using evidence-based research, experts establish a clear picture of what is now considered a "normal" childhood, versus healthy cognitive, physical, and emotional development. The goal is to wake people up and assist those searching for honest, clear solutions to the problems their children are facing.

It all starts with knowing the truth.

Note: Addiction, nutrition, social media, screen infatuation, the over-sexualization of children, and emotional disconnection are key issues to be discussed.
